Unwarranted fan loyalty makes zero sense to me

The Social Media Pessimist

» sely@redeye.chicago.com
» @theseanwow

Sometimes I cannot believe how unjustifiably hysterical and socially unaware certain sports fans can be.

And yes, I realize this is an extremely touchy subject right now—especially with the Cubs flying that “W” all over the city—but it needs to be addressed.

Why are you a rah-rah, die-hard, Facebook status-posting fan of a team without an actual deep-rooted tie? Where does this fiery passion come from?

For the past three football seasons, I created sketch videos—via my “Social Media Pessimist” YouTube channel—telling people, “You aren’t allowed to be an overly devoted fan of a college football team if you didn’t go to school there.”

Roughly 80,000 views alongside hundreds of comments (from those on both sides of the argument) came through. Keep in mind, this is just my stupid personal channel. But as we know, all it takes is one person’s opinions and a video camera to start a very heated debate.

But I stand by that bold statement, with a few exceptions of course. If you work there or paid your child’s tuition fees, sure. And yeah, you can wear your significant other’s school colors on a game day. You’re not the problem.

It’s the loonies you see screaming at the corner TV in a bar. Or those referring to the team as “we” in conversation. Or the guys who paint their faces and buy third-row seats before starting chants in their section at the stadium.

I’m sorry, but, uh ... I just don’t get it.

You didn’t study there. Or graduate from there. Or live in the dorms.

Your internal monologue: “Everyone is loving this! I’m totally a part of this university!”

Our internal monologue: “You’re a [bleeping psychopath.]”

I’m an MSU kid who grew up surrounded by “Wal-Mart Wolverines,” as they’re called. But outside of the University of Michigan-Michigan State University rivalry, I didn’t bother worrying much about this false loyalty thing.

That is, until this fall, as the Cubs made an unbelievable turnaround from past years. And now, here the city sits, awaiting a potential freakin’ National League pennant, something the Cubbies haven’t achieved since 1945.

But holy freakin’ cow, guys. I have never seen so many “new” Cubs fanatics in my life. I know a guy who quit his job because his boss wouldn’t let him skip work for a game. He’s lived in Chicago for 18 months. Like I said: psychopath.

Sure, bandwagon fans are everywhere. I’m not shocked they’re appearing out of thin air.

I’m shocked because I don’t get where the passion comes from. Or how it ever formed. Or how it feels natural to care this much.

Are you someone who loves trends? Do you just love the Cubs’ colors? Does living in Lincoln Park for three years really give you a sense of burning loyalty for what real Cubs fans have gone through decade after decade?

Don’t get my words twisted, either. I am happy for the Cubs fans who have been waiting forever for this. Those from Chicago, or the surrounding suburbs? Those whose parents brought them to games as a kid and it means everything that you had that connection with a loved one? Even when they were miserable to mediocre at best? Hell yes. Because that cuts deep. And you hung on.

My heart truly goes out to you guys. You earned this. I can relate. I was born and raised in Detroit for 25 years; a fan of the 0-16 Lions in 2008 and the 119-loss Tigers in 2003. I never wavered. I never thought about buying a Cubs shirt in the years I’ve lived here. Real sports fans know that mentality. And they live it.

I’m calling out those Chicago transplants who are switching loyalties from their hometown team to the Cubs. That’s not how it works. One hundred percent no, every time.

Re-evaluate your Amazon.com shopping cart that currently holds four Cubs shirts.

And for the love of God, get out of the way so real Cubs fans have room to enjoy this.

Lake Shore Drive projects set to begin

By Jon Hilkevitch | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

A 1½-mile stretch of North Lake Shore Drive downtown that handles 140,000 vehicles a day will receive a badly needed restoration starting Monday.

And just south of downtown, the next phase of rebuilding the interchange between Lake Shore Drive and the Stevenson Expressway also kicks off Monday.

Both projects will require lane reductions that result in travel delays, city and state transportation officials warn.

North Lake Shore Drive between Grand and North avenues will receive its first resurfacing in 16 years over the next four weeks, according to the Chicago Department of Transportation.

The initial work will occur on northbound lanes, closing two lanes from approximately 8:15 p.m. to 5:45 a.m. between Grand and North, CDOT said. Two lanes in each direction will remain open in the overnight hours. From 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m., single-lane closures will take place in each direction, officials said.

At two separate overnight dates still to be announced, the S-curve portion of the drive between Walton Street and Michigan Avenue will be closed to all traffic, likely in one direction at a time, CDOT spokesman Mike Claffey said.

"The message on those nights is, 'Do not take Lake Shore Drive,'" Claffey said.

The resurfacing will be completed before Thanksgiving, he said.

Meanwhile, drivers who switch between Lake Shore Drive and the Stevenson (I-55) should get ready for a new traffic configuration that will remain until next summer, according to the Illinois Department of Transportation.

Beginning Monday, three lanes on the inbound Stevenson approaching the Lake Shore Drive interchange will be reduced to two narrower lanes from just east of the Dan Ryan Expressway (I-90/94), IDOT said. The existing single lane from the inbound Stevenson to the southbound Lake Shore Drive ramp will be narrowed and shifted to the right side of the ramp.

In addition, 25th Street will be reduced to one lane in each direction, and street parking will be banned between King Drive and Donnelly Drive/McCormick Place busway, IDOT said. Once the closures are in place by Nov. 3, they will remain until next summer.

tonight's CHOICES

7 p.m. on CBS 2
The Big Bang Theory

It's the old game of "I may not be with you, but I don't want anyone else to be with you, either" for Sheldon (Jim Parsons) in the new episode "The Perspiration Implementation." He's not sure what to do when ex-girlfriend Amy (Mayim Bialik) draws the interest of Barry Kripke (John Ross Bowie). Stuart's efforts to bring more of a female clientele to the Comic Book Store gains the support of Amy, Penny (Kaley Cuoco) and Bernadette (Melissa Rauch).

7 p.m. on NBC 5
The Voice

The new episode "The Battles, Part 3" continues the rounds that pit same-team members against each other, with Missy Elliot, John Fogerty, Selena Gomez and Brad Paisley still on board as guest mentors. They combine their musical expertise with that of the show's usual coaches — Adam Lambert, Blake Shelton, Gwen Stefani and Pharrell Williams — to determine who stays in the contest, which may mean "stealing" hopefuls from another team.

7 p.m. on WGN 9
Crazy Ex-Girlfriend

Rebecca (Rachel Bloom, who also wrote the script with fellow executive producer Aline Brosh McKenna) encounters a big hurdle to her plan to win Josh (Vincent Rodriguez III) back in the new episode "Josh's Girlfriend Is Really Cool!" Indeed, there's another woman in his life, a yoga instructor (guest star Gabrielle Ruiz) who quickly becomes the new object of Rebecca's ... well, obsession. Donna Lynne Champlin, Santino Fontana and Pete Gardner also star.

7 p.m. on FOX 32
Gotham

If one criminal is dangerous, a legion of them is that much worse — and that's what plagues Gotham when Galavan and Penguin (James Frain, Robin Lord Taylor) team up with a lethal family in the new episode "Rise of the Villains: Scarification." Even more trouble is afoot because of the tension between the Galavans and the Wayne clan, landing Gordon (Ben McKenzie) squarely in the middle. Guest stars include Ron Rifkin ("Alias"). Michael Chiklis also stars.

8 p.m. on CBS 2
Scorpion

Though it's not Halloween yet, the members of Team Scorpion do some masquerading in the new episode "Super Fun Guys." They go to Kazakhstan and the location of a movie that's filming there, but as might be expected, serving as costumed extras for the picture isn't their main mission. They've been dispatched to deactivate a nuclear missile that terrorists are trying to market. Peri Gilpin ("Frasier") and Kevin Weisman ("Alias") continue their guest roles.

Sullivan Stapleton stars in "Blindspot" Monday on NBC.

8 p.m. on WGN 9
Jane the Virgin

New mom Jane (Gina Rodriguez) is distracted from her maternal duties by the rivalry between Rafael and Michael (Justin Baldoni, Brett Dier) over her in the new "Chapter Twenty-Four." Xo and Rogelio (Andrea Navedo, Jaime Camil) try to avoid a lawsuit by agreeing to a cruise-ship performance. Rafael and Petra (Yael Grobglas) have their doubts about Lachlan (guest star Michael Rady). Alba (Ivonne Coll) comes to a major decision.

8 p.m. on PBS 11
Antiques Roadshow

A new visit to Chicago begins with the assessment of an item related specifically to the city's history: a signed 1969 subpoena for the Chicago Seven, the group of protesters charged with alleged conspiracy to disrupt the previous year's Democratic Convention. Also presented for valuation are a 1976 Playboy Bunny collection — photographs and articles, not the actual women, we assume — and an oil painting by Leonora Carrington. Mark L. Walberg is the host.

8 p.m. on FOX 32
Minority Report

When Vega (Meagan Good) is revealed to be a forthcoming crime victim, she and Dash (Stark Sands) seek questionable help from the past in the new episode "The Present." Their possible ally was involved in the murder of Vega's father. Among the guest stars here is a real blast from the past: Stefan Arngim, who played young Barry in the sci-fi series "Land of the Giants." Reed Diamond also guest stars.

8:59 p.m. on CBS 2
NCIS: Los Angeles

Michael Weatherly makes a crossover appearance in his "NCIS" role in the new episode "Blame It on Rio," as DiNozzo combs Los Angeles for a prisoner who escaped from him en route back to the U.S. from Singapore. Of course, he seeks — and gets — help from his West Coast counterparts including Callen and Sam (Chris O'Donnell, LL Cool J). Linda Hunt, Daniela Ruah and Eric Christian Olsen also star.

9 p.m. on NBC 5
Blindspot

Rarely are the FBI and the CIA seen in direct competition, but it happens in the new episode "Split the Law." A hostage crisis with global reach puts both agencies on the trail of a felon. Carter and Mayfair (guest star Michael Gaston, Marianne Jean-Baptiste) clash over their takes on the reliability of Jane (Jaimie Alexander), who is overcome upon being introduced to Weller's (Sullivan Stapleton) family. Jordana Spiro and Jay O. Sanders guest star.

9 p.m. on PBS 11
I'll Have What Phil's Having

Hong Kong is "Everybody Loves Raymond" veteran Phil Rosenthal's culinary destination in this new episode, and he's definitely a stranger in a strange land as he samples the culture that the Pacific city with a rich and complex history has to offer. When it comes to the food, Rosenthal tries a dish involving eggs that are a century old, and he also tries a tea purported to have medicinal benefits in addition to satisfying immediate thirst.

9 p.m. on FX
Fargo

In a new episode called "Before the Law," Floyd Gerhardt (Jean Smart) and her family get a surprising offer. Elsewhere, two highly unlikely murderers do everything they can to clean up the messy aftermath of their crime. Kirsten Dunst, Jesse Plemons, Ted Danson, Jeffrey Donovan, Patrick Wilson and Kieran Culkin also star.

9:01 p.m. on ABC 7
Castle

In the "Transporter" movies, the title character wasn't permanently damaged — but someone else in that line of work isn't so lucky in the new episode "The Mask." The person is killed while trying to get a valuable artwork to its destination, and Castle and Beckett (Nathan Fillion, Stana Katic) have the help of a witness in seeking the painting and solving the murder. Stephanie Weir ("The Comedians") guest stars.

SLASHING THE TRASH

SPORTS VENUES SHIFTING TOWARD GREENER STADIUM CONCESSIONS

By Tyler Lockman | FOR REDEYE

Save for maybe Thanksgiving and the movie theater, there are few places people like to chow down more than ballparks, arenas and stadiums. Sports fans love to eat. It's tradition.

But when 22,000 Blackhawks fans gather for a game at the United Center, perhaps the furthest thing from their minds is what's in that Polish sausage or double bacon cheeseburger, and where the waste it creates is headed afterward.

As it turns out, the answers to those questions have changed a lot in recent years, as sports venues nationwide have made greener concessions processes a key piece of their sustainability efforts.

"We are seeing the start of a significant cultural and marketplace shift towards environmentally intelligent food at sports venues," Allen Hershkowitz, co-founder and president of the Green Sports Alliance, said in a statement.

The Green Sports Alliance, a nonprofit group of which many of Chicago's teams and stadiums are members, assembled in Chicago earlier this year to highlight nationwide efforts to make game day greener.

Fans probably won't notice those efforts, but they probably can rest easy knowing their favorite teams are going greener—and saving some green in the process.

WASTE REDUCTION

According to Environmental Protection Agency data, the U.S. generated 36 million tons of food waste in 2011 alone, with only 4 percent of that being utilized for composting. Sports teams and venues have started doing their part to improve that figure.

Soldier Field recently launched a pilot program to compost from its main kitchen, where Aramark already was tracking food waste. Soldier Field Director of Operations Bill Shaw said the hope is that it grows to include catering and all concessions.

"That was something Aramark was really on board with," Shaw said.

Levy Restaurants provides concessions at Wrigley Field, the United Center and suites at U.S. Cellular Field. The company has a wide-ranging plan to cut down on waste, detailed in a report by the University of Chicago's Sustainable Chicago Sports Project.

A Bears fan eats at Soldier Field.
CHRIS WALKER/TRIBUNE FILE

First off, all the napkins and food carriers used are made from recycled and compostable materials. Going deeper, Levy recycles all used cooking oil from Chicago's stadiums, with some of that being used to produce biofuels. Efforts with more tangible impact come in the form of food recovery. Tom Funk, Levy's vice president of concessions, said the company donated 535,000 pounds of leftover food nationwide in 2014, food that once would likely have been tossed out after going unsold at a game.

LOCAL SOURCING

Before stadium food creates any waste, it has to come from somewhere. Lately, its journey to your seat has been getting shorter as teams have committed to locally sourced ingredients; call it "farm-to-bleachers."

According to a Green Sports Alliance report, some teams are getting smarter about menu design and planning, which includes adapting to the local supply of certain ingredients.

Currently, all of Levy's 100-plus U.S. sports and entertainment venues source at least some food locally.

In one hyper-local example, Levy, the Chicago Botanic Garden and Chicago-based Midwest Foods partner to provide fresh produce for U.S. Cellular Field. The upside to such practices, Funk says, is environmental as well as financial.

"We believe care for the environment and meeting business goals do not have to be mutually exclusive," he said.

While many people still aren't convinced about the need to be more environmentally friendly, it's hard to imagine a sports franchise anywhere not interested in saving some money by doing it.

THE DIGITS 15-30%

Approximately 15 to 30 percent of the food served at concession stands in Chicago venues is sourced within 300 miles of the city.

100%

All Levy Restaurants venues use food carriers and napkins made from recycled or biodegradable/compostable material. Levy provides concessions at Wrigley Field, the United Center and suites at U.S. Cellular Field.

300

During Bulls and Blackhawks season, the United Center donates more than 300 pounds of leftover food per month to the Salvation Army. Wrigley Field and U.S. Cellular Field make similar donations.

735,000 POUNDS

Estimated amount of leftover food Levy Restaurants donates annually duced by the venue, taking the responsibility of doing it off potentially intoxicated fans.

In that way and others, more teams are taking steps so fans can enjoy that jumbo helmet full of nachos guilt-free on game day.

DEFEAT IN DETROIT

RedEye

The Bears couldn't keep their winning streak intact on Sunday, dropping an overtime contest to the Lions in Detroit.

A game that saw many errors, turnovers and costly penalties committed by both teams ended with a 27-yard field goal by Detroit's Matt Prater, giving the Lions their first win of the season.

Bears wide receiver Alshon Jeffery returned after missing four games due to a hamstring injury. He caught eight passes for 147 yards and a touchdown.

The Bears' record drops to 2-4 going into the bye week. They next play Minnesota on Nov. 1.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED.

Kyle Fuller (bottom) tackles Ameer Abdullah in the second quarter.

Calvin Johnson makes a reception in OT.

Lions fullback Zach Zenner (center) grimaces after being tackled by Adrian Amos in the second quarter.

Robbie Gould kicks a field goal, which sent the game into OT.

Matthew Stafford and Jay Cutler after Sunday's game.

5 random things to know about the Mets

By Phil Thompson, Chris Kuc and Tim Bannon | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

1. Bartolo Colon is so old. The right-hander, who had two different stints with the White Sox during his career, is the last active major-leaguer to have once played for the Montreal Expos. At 42, Colon is the oldest active player in the National League.

2. If you're comparing the Cubs' and Mets' celebrity fans, it's not a fair fight. Pop culture is polluted with famous

New Yorkers. That said, here's a rundown of stars who have professed their love for the Mets: Jon Stewart, Chris Rock, Jerry Seinfeld, Hilary Swank, Kevin James, Adam Sandler, Billy Joel and Spider-Man (Peter Parker is a Queens native).

3. Jacob deGrom has the most magnificent hair in major league baseball. "I was thinking about cutting it, but I don't think I can now," he told the New York Post, saying he fears a Samson moment if he cuts it.

4. Mets skipper Terry Collins, 66, is the oldest manager in the majors. He's managed the Mets since 2011, where his record is 394-416.

5. The Mets has some serious comic book karma backing their roster. First baseman Lucas Duda's nickname is the Hulk, pitcher Matt Harvey is known as the Dark Knight and fellow starter Noah Syndergaard is better known as Thor.

'Z for Zachariah' is complex but predictable

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

» mpais@redeye
chicago.com
» @mattpais

In a postapocalyptic world with virtually no one around, it would be fortunate for anyone to stumble upon you and tell you to get out of the radioactive water.

But Loomis (Chiwetel Ejiofor) is particularly lucky that his savior is Ann (Margot Robbie), a warm, lovely woman who nurses him back to health and eventually attempts to seduce him. Let's wait, he says. It will change things, and we have all the time in the world.

Because that's the way things go, almost immediately their society of two gains a third: Caleb (Chris Pine), who's handsome and, like Ann, a member of the striking blue eyes club. Skepticism and jealousy ensue. I can't help but wonder how much more about human nature might be revealed if the same situation occurred but no one was attracted to anybody and some or all of the characters were annoying. Would the same sense of expectation and romantic possibility emerge, with the logic being that something is better than nothing?

A lot of unspoken feeling lives on these faces, though, as good performances (Robbie in particular creates a complex world of conflicting emotions and humble priorities within Ann) compensate for a plot that's low on incident and high on predictability. "Z for Zachariah" comes from the novel by Robert

C. O'Brien and is directed by Craig Zobel, who seems to have spent all his risk-taking tokens on his last film, 2012's "Compliance." In "Z," the sleepy pacing seems to suggest a big punch will arrive, but this is a light tap of humanity in hard times, basic truths about faith and trust that are as subdued as the film and its landscape. Sometimes a movie really just needs some zombies.

ORIGINALLY PUBLISHED DURING THE 2015 SUNDANCE FILM FESTIVAL. "Z FOR ZACHARIAH" COMES OUT ON DVD ON TUESDAY.

Much of what would become BØRNS' debut album "Dopamine" was written in a Los Angeles tree-house, complete with "woodland creatures" as neighbors. This is just one reason that 23-year-old Michigan-raised singer-songwriter Garrett Borns is basically synth-pop Snow White.

I don't mean that comparison as a knock. Like Disney movies, pop music works best when it instills a sense of childhood wonder, recalling carefree summers of just running around and having fun. As its title suggests, "Dopamine" is just that—11 tracks of well-executed, often-whimsical pop created to hit those pleasure centers in the brain for maximum effect. Opener "10,000 Emerald Pools," which randomly takes its name from the former Las Vegas address of producer Jack Kennedy's mother (I assume she had to sell once the song took off), uses its title as a metaphor for "diving deeper for you." It's a lovely sentiment that's amplified by Beach Boys-aping falsetto and eternally chill vibes.

Unfortunately, it's also the the best song on here, though not by too much. There could be an argument made for the Taylor Swift-endorsed single "Electric Love." While awfully catchy, its guitar riff is a shade too close to the superior Tame Impala song "Elephant." When it doesn't resemble the Australians' psych-rock smash, it veers toward what local critic Jes Skolnik aptly describes as "Lion King" pop-rock, which is exactly what you think it means. (OK, that Disney comparison was a knock.)

Elsewhere, "The Emotion" is a strong dose of Smiths-referencing melancholy that finds BØRNS singing, "Escape out of my mind zone, love/I lost you not long ago; heaven knows I'm miserable." That, the synth-heavy "Dug My Heart" and the peppy, explosive closer "Fool" just about reach the ceiling "Pools" sets. The songwriting is always competent and pleasant, but it's his absolutely gorgeous, distinctive voice that keeps "Dopamine" going even when songs like "American Money" or "Clouds" feel slightly interchangeable. And a singer with actual singing ability shouldn't be taken for granted.

BREWING STYLE

By Morgan Olsen | REDEYE

If Miller High Life is the champagne of beers, then a men's clothing line inspired by the brew would have to include tailored suits and pocket squares, right? Eh, not exactly. When Miller High Life reached out to Jim Snediker, the founder and CEO of Chicago-based Stock Mfg. Co., they were looking for something to emulate the rich history of the brand. Snediker and his team said yes and were given full access to the company's archives to dig for inspiration.

They found an abundance of it hiding in the brand's vintage ads. Back in the '30s, '40s and '50s, those colorful ads featured laid-back fishermen, hunters, family guys and cowboys. And though they were definitely selling beer, the pages were packed with fashion statements from the decades they were printed: chunky sweaters in toasty cabins, worn-in denim on the ranch and cozy flannel shirts at the bar.

Snediker and his team identified key trends and created a seven-piece collection that's available online and at their brick-and-mortar location in West Town.

"A big thing was looking for items that would be a timeless style but also be interpreted in contemporary fashion," Snediker said. "We wanted clothing to reflect our brand, so we looked for pieces that fit in with our brand and had a strong presence in the ads."

A plaid shirt ($88), riding pants ($88) and a sportsman's jacket ($250) all grace the collection, while two T-shirt options ($35 each) offer a more affordable entry point for consumers. Casual? Yes. But the pieces are also refined and boast high-end details.

"People dressed up more often back then," Snediker said. "We wanted to make things that were very functional but also collectible."

The collection launched online today and is available for a limited time.

TAROT.COM

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You might come on too strong as you attempt to convey your opinion or desires. Kick it down a notch (or 10) and then you might have some luck. Also, remember to keep private affairs private. Discretion is rewarded. So is tact.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

A conversation with one of your pals might be exactly what you need this week to help you make a life-changing decision about your love life. Another possibility is that you and a friend will be ready to take your connection to the next level.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

If you make a social commitment with your sweetheart, it's possible that you'll need to cancel last-minute, and your lover will not be happy about it! Do what you can to keep your schedule fluid.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Perhaps your lover has a fascinating spiritual or philosophical perspective he or she wants to share with you. On Friday, it'll bring you closer than you ever imagined. On Sunday, you'll be more optimistic about your love life than you have in quite some time.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

This week it's possible that a major payout from a behind-the-scenes source will put you and your partner on a whole new level. You'll have the kind of money you need to make a real dent in your financial goals together.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Your heart and soul are in your relationship these days. It appears that you and your mate are truly in a magical place together. On Friday, it's possible that you two will work toward a mutual dream.

Aries March 21-April 19

If in a relationship, do your best this week to navigate past frustrating (and temporary) mental roadblocks without creating unnecessary problems. If single, an office romance might heat up this week. It might be too hot to handle but oh so worth it!

Taurus April 20-May 20

Romance is off the charts for you this week! Don't question it—relish it! Romance is transformational, fulfilling and expansive. You'll feel so blessed to share love with your special someone.

Gemini May 21-June 21

No matter how hard you try, it might feel like it's impossible to get what you want out of your lover. The problem is about irreconcilable differences. Be the bigger person and ask yourself if it's more important to be right or to be in love.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You'll have a magnificent opportunity to restore your relationship this week by having a deep and meaningful conversation with your partner on Friday. Suddenly, it'll feel as if it's almost effortless to compromise.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Communication won't be your strong suit this week, so do your best to avoid weighty conversations with your partner. The good news? Finances look wonderful this week, and you two will probably enjoy an indulgent weekend together.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Your love life might seem too good to be true this week. On Sunday, Venus and Jupiter embrace in your sign. Love is divine, and you're oozing beauty and joy. What could be better?

THE DIGIT

$23.5M

That's how much the "Goosebumps" movie scared up in its opening weekend, according to ew.com. The film, based on those books that freaked you out when you were a kid and starring Jack Black, beat two-week winner "The Martian" for the No. 1 spot at the box office. Tom Hanks' "Bridge of Spies," gothic horror "Crimson Peak" and "Hotel Transylvania 2" rounded out the Top 5.

Selena & Biebs part 2?

You could sing about your ex ... or you could sing with your ex. On Saturday evening, a new track by Justin Bieber appeared on OVO Sound Radio featuring none other than his ex-girlfriend Selena Gomez, according to online.com. The song, a simple duet reportedly titled "Strong," includes lyrics such as "You're the only one I'm really missing" and "When will I get over this?" We're pretty meh about the song itself but kind of excited for the gossip that's sure to follow it.

So much Star Wars

We're getting closer and closer to the new story from that galaxy far, far away. Lucasfilm announced Sunday that the final trailer for "Star Wars: The Force Awakens" will debut at halftime of this week's "Monday Night Football" on ESPN, according to USAToday.com. After the trailer launch, tickets will go on sale online for the movie and for a seven-movie marathon event planned for Dec. 17 at theaters nationwide, including a few in the Chicago area (details at starwars.com). Also on Sunday, Lucasfilm released a new poster for the movie that features old favorites Han Solo (Harrison Ford) and Princess Leia (Carrie Fisher) as well as several new characters. "The Force Awakens" hits theaters Dec. 18.

THE QUOTE

"I don't have a Super PAC—I don't even have a backpack! I carry my stuff around loose in my arms, like a professor, you know, between classes! I own one pair of underwear, that's it! Some of these billionaires, they got three, four pairs!"

—Larry David, playing Democratic presidential hopeful Bernie Sanders on "Saturday Night Live." The comedian appeared alongside, among others, Alec Baldwin as ex-Sen. Jim Webb and Kate McKinnon as Hillary Clinton. Sanders himself approved of the performance: "I think we'll use Larry on our next rally," he said on "This Week With George Stephanopoulos" on Sunday morning. "He does better than I do."

He acts! He sings!

Is there anything Tom Hiddleston can't do? After the premiere of his new Hank Williams biopic, "I Saw the Light," on Saturday in Nashville, Hiddleston surprised guests with a performance of several Williams classics, the Associated Press reported. The British actor, who "spent months learning how to talk and sing like the iconic country singer," according to the AP, performed a short set that included "Move It on Over" and "Hey Good Lookin'." Originally set to hit theaters Nov. 28, the movie is now slated to be released March 25, according to variety.com.
